What is meant by mental wellness?

Our emotional, psychological, and social well-being are all components of our mental health. This disorder influences our thoughts, feelings, and behaviors and impacts our capacity to manage daily stress. We will always experience some form of mental health problems throughout our lives because it is an ongoing issue.

What is the impact of mental health on college students?

Students with poor mental health may experience difficulties in many areas of their lives, including difficulty in school and obtaining good grades, difficulty remembering information, negative peer relationships, and poor physical health.

College Students' Early Warning Signs

- Overeating or under sleeping
- Avoiding social interactions
- Having little to no energy
- Sensation of numbness or insignificance
- Feeling abandoned or powerless
- Having extreme mood swings
- Feeling very confused, tense, furious, angry, or anxious

Creating a Website and Form

We developed a website survey to inquire about the mental health of university and college students. Eleven questions are included in the questionnaire, including your gender, your current academic standing, the kind of major you are pursuing, the extent to which your mental health has deteriorated since the start of the semester, and whether you have a support network you can lean on in difficult times.

Demographic:

Gender, Academic Status, and Chosen Major heavily affect student's mental health due to work-load and pressure.

Our Research Results

Students in college this semester saw a decline in mental health. Just 43% of students displayed mental health symptoms during their high school years, whereas over 50% of students had no mental health issues prior to beginning college. Consequently, only 78% of the participants report having a reliable support network, and 22% report having no one to turn to during these difficult times. These days, anxiety and low self-esteem have been their most common feelings. causing them to withdraw from social gatherings and activities.

Advice on Mental Health for College Students

- Establish a healthy schedule that does not cause you stress.
- Remind yourself that you can't do everything at once and give yourself a break.
- It's okay to ask for assistance.
- Practice mindfulness to reduce stress.
- Exercise, rest, and good diet are ways to take care of your body.

It's not about perfect. It's about effort.
And when you bring that effort every single day, that's where transformation happens. That's how change occurs.
